

Voted “Best Lawyer for Construction Law” 2020 and 2021, Adine Abro (LLB) is managing director of Bryanston-based Adine Abro Attorneys. With over 14 years’ experience in the specialist field of construction & engineering law, Adine takes a trusted advisor approach to all her matters.

Born and raised in Johannesburg, her career spans several post-graduate courses, including the advanced Association of Arbitrators Construction Law Course and enrolment at Cambridge University. Progressing from candidate attorney to partner at Webber Wentzel, Adine then became partner at leading firms Cliffe Dekker Hofmeyr and Baker McKenzie, respectively.

Now at the helm of her own boutique construction law firm, Adine is pioneering the advent of AI-driven systems that enable outperformance of larger firms with unprecedented turnaround time and fluid work processes.

Relentless in a desire to understand and support her clients in meaningful ways, Adine exemplifies the ideal of collaborative relationship. With client engagement and well-coordinated team support central to dispute resolution, her approach is uncompromisingly ethical and compassionate.

Awarded the Acritas star for stellar performance as a stand-out lawyer in private practice annually since 2017, Adine continually sustains her reputation within the industry.

Both a member of the Association of Arbitrators and the Society of Construction Law for Africa, Adine’s efficiency and effectiveness are kept on par with industry standards. Well-established relationships with various senior counsel and industry experts also bring ongoing gravitas to her advanced skillset.

Decisiveness. Leadership. Heart. These are the cornerstones of Adine’s ability to constantly produce results with flair and tenacity.

As the firm’s tagline so acutely testifies, this is construction law done “the Abro Way.”
